Diné Southwest High School Charter, page 6 – 1.0 Comprehensive Program of Instruction. 1.1 Curriculum and Assessment. Paragraph 1.

1.0 COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM OF INSTRUCTION

1.1 Curriculum and Assessment

The Dine Southwest community school is an ambitious concept school that promotes the highest possible academic success for all students. The school's instructional program and methodology specifically targets those students who have previously had less success than they would like in traditional, large, off-reservation educational environments. The program affords these students and their families a further opportunity to succeed in high school and successfully prepare for post-secondary education and gainful employment. A specialized program of instruction (see graduation requirements below) and curriculum combine to support the essential academic achievements and expectations of 2 and 4-year colleges and universities and the employment opportunities of the next millennium. With an appropriate grade point average, test scores, and completion of the relevant suggested Program of Study, this curriculum empowers the Diné Southwest community school graduate to apply to post-secondary programs and employers with confidence that the student is prepared to succeed.

With an appropriate grade point average, test scores, and completion of the relevant suggested Program of Study, this curriculum empowers the Diné Southwest community school graduate to apply to post-secondary programs and employers with confidence that the student is prepared to succeed. In order to insure that comprehensive instruction is available to all students, within all subject areas, Diné Southwest High School also offers a wide range of correspondence based coursework (list appended) which is fully aligned with Arizona state standards and meets North Central Association accreditation requirements. Students perform required tasks via correspondence instruction with additional teacher support available from the correspondence instruction provider. This supplemental coursework allows Diné Southwest High School to provide an array of instructional services otherwise unavailable in a remote rural location. Diné Southwest High School teachers provide support, guidance, and individual instruction as students carry out their correspondence-based course work.

Narrative

The current instructional program at Diné Southwest High School is designed to address the following objectives per its current charter: 1.) rigorous and challenging education 2.) demonstration of mastery through application of skills and knowledge 3.) vocational preparedness. The offering of supplemental correspondence-based courses, fully aligned with Arizona state standards, and North Central Association accredited is consistent with these objectives. Therefore, Diné Southwest High School is not substantively changing instructional direction, purpose, or technique through this supplemental coursework offering. This coursework is administered by Diné Southwest High School teachers in a classroom environment, with additional support available from credentialed teachers associated with the correspondence coursework provider. Courses meet all Arizona state standards, with assessments which are consistent with those currently in use by Diné Southwest High School for teacher delivered coursework. Teachers monitor student progress, provide continuing individual instruction and maintain student progress records during the entire correspondence coursework process. Textbooks are provided for students through the correspondence coursework provider, and all student production and assessment is evaluated and recorded by this provider. In addition to being aligned with Arizona state standards, the correspondence-based curriculum is also accredited with the Commission on International and Transregional Accreditation.

The expected outcomes for the instructional program at Diné Southwest High School are college or vocational placement for students. The addition of supplemental correspondence-based coursework makes it possible to offer a far wider variety of instruction than would be available in such a remote school location. This supplemental coursework assures that students will graduate from Diné Southwest High School, fully prepared to meet the challenges of college or entry level vocations.
